Professional Focus: Research and Coaching

I am a Researcher and Certified Coach with a PhD in Anthropology, a Master's in Sociology, and a Bachelor's in Business Administration. With over two decades of experience, I design and deliver academic workshops, training sessions, and coaching for students, researchers, and professionals. My research focuses on how individuals and communities endure war, displacement, and structural violence, navigating oppressive systems, making sense of challenging realities, and responding to injustice in creative, life-affirming ways.

Over time, my academic work awakened a deeper calling: not only to study people's lives and cultures, but also to walk alongside them in their journeys of transformation. This journey led me to become a Visionary Coach.

At the heart of my Coaching work is a simple belief: with the right support, people can transform constraint into possibility, and adversity into strength.
